Former Congo Premier Still Held in Jail After Deadline

LEOPOLDVILLE, The Congo with Gen. Victor Lundula, former (AP)—Aides of Patrice Lumumba, commander in chief of the Congo today held off carrying out their order to seize the whites in Stanleyville and behind some of the military police unit holding them. The ex-premier was still in Stanleyville.

One western official here said, "The pressure seems to be off for the moment."

The rebels had threatened to arrest all Europeans "and cut off some of the heads" of Belgian hostages if Lumumba was not set free by 3 p.m. yesterday.

Arrests in Border Town
United Nations reports from the area said no whites had been arrested so far in Stanleyville itself. An unknown number of arrests was reported at Aru, a town on the borders of Oriental province and Katanga.

The U.N. commander in Stanleyville, Ethiopian Gen. Mengistu Tassu, conferred this morning

Fresh Snows Hit Big Part Of Southwest

Power Lines Down, Traffic Tied Up in Many Communities

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—A mighty snowstorm, already blamed for more than a dozen deaths, swung fresh punches today at a sector stretching from the central Rockies over much of the Southwest.

The icy storm isolated towns in several states, shattered communication lines, halted travel and knocked out power lines.

El Paso, at the New Mexico border, was buried in 6 to 8 inches of snow and the figure was expected to grow to 10 by morning.

Marfa, Tex., 200 miles east of El Paso, has been isolated for two days. Ham radio operators made contact last night and learned conditions in the area were critical.

Traffic snarled
"We're in rough shape," Jim O'Brien, publisher of the Big Bend Sentinel, told the El Paso Times. "Our phones are out, our television tower's top half has blown off and it's hard to say when the utility company is going to get our power fully restored."

Traffic snarled in and around the El Paso area and across the line into New Mexico.

"I cannot understand why people want to get out and travel in weather like this," said veteran Texas Ranger Jim Nance. "We had a big jam in the Quitman mountains 14 miles west of El Paso on U.S. 20 and wreckers had to pull trucks, causing the traffic — too much of it for the weather — to jam up behind."

"It's a mess," he said. The storm slackened its fury in New Mexico and Arizona while dumping more than six inches at Canon City in south central Colorado since noon yesterday. There was 11-15 inches reported at Wolf Creek Pass and two inches dropped in the Denver area during the night.

Light snow in the Arizona mountains was expected and northern roads, although still icy, were open. The storm activity dropped off in New Mexico and improved weather conditions were forecast for the weekend.

At least five deaths in New Mexico and eight in Texas had been attributed directly or indirectly to the weather.

Police Fire Tear Gas At Rioters in Algeria

Mobs Try to Storm Official Residence of President De Gaulle

Moslems Crowd Around French President Charles de Gaulle on his arrival today in Ain Temchent, where the French leader motored after his arrival by air in Oran, Algeria. DeGaulle's visit to the North African territory of Algeria touched off mob demonstrations in Algiers and Oran.

ALGIERS (AP)—Riot police firing tear gas grenades today drove back howling mobs of 5,000 rioters attempting to storm the official residence of President Charles de Gaulle's representative in strife-torn Algeria.

Police attacked as the demonstrators marched on the Palais d'Etat, residence of Jean Monnet. The tough riot squads stopped a similar attempt yesterday.

Riot police and army troops also rushed to battle stations in Oran, Algeria's second largest city, where European settlers massed in the streets shouting, "DeGaulle to the stake. Algeria is French."

In Algiers police estimated up to 10,000 persons surged through the streets to protest De Gaulle's arrival in Algeria to win support for his home-rule plan.

Police maintained the rioters were a violent, vocal minority of the city's 400,000 residents.

On the beleaguered Rue Michelet, the mob kept charging police lines despite a steady barrage of tear gas grenades. Two blocks from Monnet's residence a club-wielding gang of youths chased a riot squad up an alley, showering the police with roof tiles and bricks.

No Strong Leader
Army infantrymen standing nearby did not go to the aid of the hated police.

As yet no leader has appeared to match ex-paratrooper Pierre Lagarde, co-leader of last January's strong and almost successful uprising and now a fugitive reported in Spain.

These rioters were reckless and disorganized as they spread a wave of violence across the city, shouting for De Gaulle's blood.

Reports from Oran 220 miles southwest of Algiers, said that a crowd growing larger by the hour

Child Killed in Fit of Anger

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—A 3-year-old child was killed today by a young mother last night in a fit of anger, the result of the death of one of the woman's three little girls.

Dead was Diane Guss, 3, of San Francisco.

The mother, Joanne, 23, told police she had been cutting the hair of her youngest child, Joanne, when Diane, who had been taking a bath with the oldest girl, Barbara, 5, scrambled out of the bathtub.

She said she became provoked when Diane refused to get out of her way, throwing down the scissors in a fit of anger.

Castro's Troubles Grow on 3 Fronts

Labor Union, Church and Military Groups Rap Reds

HAVANA (AP)—Trouble piled up today for Prime Minister Fidel Castro on the labor, church and military fronts with the issue of Communist infiltration of his army.

Shouts of "Cuba yes, Russia no" came from demonstrators in front of the presidential palace—and they got away with it.

Anti-Communist leaders of the Electrical Workers Union took a bold and daring stand by boycotting a Communist-managed union general assembly, which voted to demand their ouster.

In Santa Clara four Cuban men were sentenced to death by a firing squad for trying to hijack a Cuban airliner in flight over Cienfuegos Thursday night. They were thwarted when the pilot crash-landed. One woman defendant was sentenced to 20 years; another woman acquitted. A fifth man is still at large.

The union leaders' defiant refusal to bow to the Red-leaning Confederation of Cuban Workers (CTC), which demanded their ouster, could have troublesome repercussions for Castro in the labor sector—mostly hostile up to now.

Several hundred members of the union marched on the presidential palace Friday night, protesting what they called Communist infiltration of their union.

Led by their popular secretary, general, Amador Fraguas, the workers demanded an audience with Castro or President Osvaldo Dorticos.

Kennedy Quarters Appear; Show Washington in Garb of Cardinal

Japanese Police Seize
Over 5,000 Knives

TOKYO (AP)—More than 5,000 weapons were seized by police during the first week of an anti-swinging point off quarters knife drive in Tokyo. The campaign is part of a broad effort to cut crime, especially among the young people.

The Metropolitan Police Board official reports of the "Kennedy quarters." Agents added that seizures included Japanese swords there probably is little or nothing they could do about them in any case.

It costs about $2.25 to melt down and recover 1,000 quarters. Howard reported. Attack Expected On Laos Capital

Neutralist Premier Flees Nation; Pitched Battle Appears Imminent

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—A pitched battle for this Southeast Asian capital threatened today after Neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma fled the country. His hopes of a negotiated peace shattered.

The departure of the premier at dusk last night came shortly after two advance battalions of anti-Communist Gen. Phoumi Nosavar reached the outskirts of the city and began setting up siege artillery.

Souvanna arrived safely in Phnom Penh, Cambodia today. Six members of his cabinet and several members of Parliament were reported to have flown there with him in five planes.

U.S. Embassy sources in Cambodia said preparations were being made to evacuate all of the several hundred male employees of the Vientiane Embassy, and missions and other U.S. agencies. Women and children were evacuated last summer. The Vientiane embassy was said to be awaiting instructions from Washington before starting its evacuation.

Attack Expected
Red-beretted paratroopers, led by Lieutenant Col. Kone Le, who took over the capital in a surprise coup early yesterday, expected Phoumi's troops to storm the city at almost any hour.

The departure of the premier and most of the cabinet staff delayed the thing of press dispatches, but it was possible to report that at 4 a.m. today the city had been taken.

Vientiane was under curfew last night. Streets were deserted except for an occasional peacemaker of soldiers.

Phoumi's fighting forces, estimated to total 2,000 men and backed by armor and artillery such as Laos has not seen in six years of intermittent warfare with pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels, began reaching the outskirts late Friday.

They were dusty and disheveled from a 100-mile jungle march from the Nam Ou River valley, where they blasted a hole through the government forces' defenses.

The Phoumi forces appeared to be opposed only by flimsy defenses built up outside the city.

Jet Bomber Crashes

Intensive Hunt Begun

For 7 of 8 Men Aboard

BARRE, Vt. (AP)—An intensively

search was underway today for seven of an eight-man crew which parachuted from a flaming

B-52 jet bomber shortly before it crashed and exploded on a lonely farm late last night.

First word of the crash came from Maj. Karl E. Keyes, radar navigator aboard the plane, who walked into a home at Schron

Lake, N. Y.—40 miles away—after he had parachuted to safety.

Keyes, whose home is in Hyattsville,

Md., is living with his wife and their four children near Westover Air Force Base, Mass.,

where the bomber is based.

No Sign of Life

A spokesman at Westover identified six of the seven other crew-men. None was from the Middle West.

There was no sign of life near the wreckage and searchers fanned out through Vermont and State. Coast guards also searched the waters of Lake Champlain.

It began snowing shortly after dawn and the snow was expected to hamper an air search.

The air force dispatched approximately 150 men from Plattsburgh, N. Y., air force base, approximately 60 miles north of where the survivor was found.

However, base helicopters, im-grounded by snow and poor visibility, were unable to join the search.

The first thing Maj. Keyes did was to telephone his wife at Westover. She in turn notified air force authorities at the base.

Eyewitnesses said the plane

BACKACHE NEEDS THE ATTENTION OF A CHIROPRACTOR

You need a Chiropractor if you have a backache, but it is not necessary to have a backache to need a Chiropractor. In other words Chiropractors are, you might say, spine and nerve specialists, and of all the things that can go wrong with a body, backache is certainly something that should be taken care of by a Chiropractor.

Backaches like headaches indicate nerve irritation and are nature's way of telling you that something is wrong.

Consular officials from five western embassies — the United States, British, French, Greek and Portuguese — flew to Stanleyville under U.N. protection today.

The consular officials will make arrangements for protection of their citizens and a possible mass airlift out of the province.

The United States was represented by Consul General Robinson Melville of Downingtown, Pa. There was no Belgian in the group because the Congo's diplomatic relations with Belgium were broken by the defunct Lumumba government and have not been restored.

Ruled by 3 Men

Stanleyville, 775 airline miles northeast of Leopoldville and capital of Oriental Province, is ruled by three men — Lumumba's former secretary, Bernard Salumu, Lumumba's brother, Louis, and Communist-leaning Antoine Gizenga, former Congo deputy premier.

U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld gave orders for the U.N. force of 1,800 Ethiopians in Stanleyville to use force if necessary to protect the 1,000 white Europeans in Stanleyville. Eighty per cent of the whites are Belgians. Two American missionaries are among the whites trapped in the isolated city.

About 1,000 more whites, including about 200 Americans, are scattered through Oriental Province. Most of them are Protestant missionaries in remote bush missions. Those outside the capital were believed in no immediate danger since pro-Lumumba police explained trips and travel films and soldiers control only parts of the interior.

Ask Consolidation of State Inspections

MADISON (AP) — A greater consolidation of Wisconsin's inspections of weights, measures and food processing by state agencies "to get more work done for the taxpayer's dollar" was recommended Friday by Gov. Gaylord Nelson.

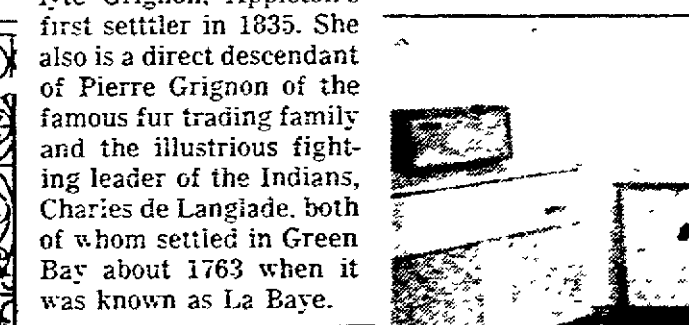

Nelson said that at present there is a jurisdictional overlap in the inspections conducted by the State Department of Agriculture, Department of Taxation and State Board of Health. He told Director Donald McDowell of the Agriculture Department that he would like to see the duplications eliminated in time to adjust the 1961-62 budgets for the three departments.

Father of 6 Dies in Crash

Ebon Heimermann, Formerly of Chilton, Was on Way to Work

HARTFORD — Ebon Heimermann, 37, Hubertus, father of six children and son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heimermann, 120 Adams St., Chilton, was killed about 6 a.m. Friday when he lost control of the auto he was driving on Washington County Highway J, about a mile north of the Waukesha County line.

Heimermann's death and one other raised the state road toll to $23, compared with $74 on this day a year ago.

Heimermann's car ran into the right ditch, struck some boulders with such force the rear axle was torn out, then crossed the road into the other ditch, where it hit more boulders and overturned.

A passing motorist found Heimermann's body. Heimermann was enroute to his job in Milwaukee with a construction firm. His body will be brought to Chilton for burial Monday.

Thomas R. Coyle, 30, of Madison died early today when an auto skidded 144 feet on icy Highway 113 at Marmine in Columbia County, slid onto the frozen Wisconsin River next to the ferry boat dock, and skidded another 50 on the ice before breaking through and plunging to the bottom in 15 feet of water.

A companion in the car, Arnold Turvey, 27, also of Madison, escaped by opening a car door and swimming to shore. The mishap occurred shortly after 1 a.m.

Authorities were unable to learn immediately which man was driving.

Heimermann's death and one other raised the state road toll to $23, compared with $74 on this day a year ago.

Army Personnel Pick Visit as Yule Gift

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Each year enlisted men at 6th Army headquarters in the Presidio of San Francisco choose a patient in his mother, Alice E. Cook, from Letterman Army Hospital to receive their Christmas gift—a visit to her home in Dec. 22 and stay until Dec. 24.

This year the man selected is Airman John E. Utterbeck, who has been a patient since June 1959, suffering auto accident injuries. The soldiers collected enough money among themselves to fly to the Presidio of San Francisco to see him.

Juvenile Cases Show Increase

1959 Only Year When Increase Less Than Population Rise

WASHINGTON (AP)—Juvenile delinquency court cases increased by 2 per cent in 1959, the smallest yearly increase during the past decade, the Children's Bureau reported Friday.

The rate has risen steadily for 11 consecutive years, but the increase in 1959 was less than the 5 per cent rise in the child population of juvenile court age—10 to 17.

There were about 433,000 juvenile delinquency cases, excluding traffic offenses, handled by the juvenile courts during 1959. These involved about 416,000 different children. The children represented 1.7 per cent of the nation's child population. Boys were referred to juvenile courts more than four times as often as girls.

The juvenile delinquency data are compiled by the bureau with cooperation of a representative sampling of juvenile courts throughout the nation.

The bureau said its 1959 findings roughly parallel data recently issued by the FBI, which showed a 4 per cent increase in police arrests of juveniles in 1959 over 1958.

Both juvenile court and police arrest data show that both juvenile arrests and court cases have more than doubled since 1943 while the population of young people has increased by less than one-half.

The 1959 findings showed a 2 per cent decrease in the number of juveniles handled in juvenile courts in urban areas while such courts serving semi-urban and rural areas had increases of 7 and 15 per cent, respectively.

Women's Society Has Yule Foods From Other Lands

Bunuelos, torttu, sprengerie, pefferrusse, kjaasjes and letter-banker and flaming plum pudding were among foods on the buffet table at Grace Lutheran Church last week when the Women's Missionary Society had its Christmas program.

"Christmas in Other Lands" was the theme. Guests were greeted by women dressed in costumes of other countries, and traditional articles were displayed in booths.

a study committee on county mental hospitals which was described as making a thorough examination of the facilities, methods and population problems of the county hospitals. It has not yet reported, but is expected to do so before the legislature comes to the point of decision on the new biennial appropriations for the state and county mental hospital services.

Ask More Aid for Mental Hospitals

Would Offer Help to Officers Of 35 County Institutions in State

MADISON — The state department of public welfare and its mental hygiene division want to provide more help for the management of the 35 county mental hospitals of Wisconsin that continue to care for the bulk of the hospitalized mentally ill within the state.

Effective state-wide leadership in the treatment and care programs of the local institutions is the obligation of its agency, as Director Wilbur Schmidt sees it. He elaborated his view in budget hearings before Gov. Gaylord Nelson.

What he called "positive programming" can be provided, he explained, by the organization of four teams of state-employed consultants in various specialties, which would serve four regional districts of the state with about nine local institutions each.

Want Leadership Outagamie, Winnebago and Waupaca counties operate hospitals to house the mentally afflicted. Schmidt said the county hospital superintendents and trustees want such leadership and aid from the state mental hygiene division staff. The county institutions outside Milwaukee County now have about 9,000 patients, or far more than those accommodated in state hospitals. Milwaukee County has about 5,000.

Other discussions at appropriations hearings indicated that the historically unique Wisconsin system of partnership between the state and the counties in the provision of hospital care for mentally ill is growing in favor in American psychiatric circles.

More Appreciated Harry Spindler, executive of the new state mental health advisory committee, said the Wisconsin system of confining the chronically ill in hospitals near their homes and families, and the curable patients in the state hospital with more intensive treatment facilities, is now more widely appreciated.

The state department now has

Effect of Population Growth Seen as Survival Challenge

About 140,000 people are born each day. Suburbia Revisited "Wine, Women and Word," by Ed Fisher, is a tongue-in-cheek novel of decadent Rome. Fisher's Rome, however, is occupied by Angry Young Men, gray-flannel togas, and a goodly share of wantonness.

Margaret Halsey, the wife of a regional planner, has set out to vindicate the suburbanites in replacing "This Darn Paradise," a Westchester diary. It tells about normal people, not the tired, gray-soaked commuters so often pictured.

Other new novels are "The Berlin Couriers," by James McGovern, a cloak-and-dagger mystery story about West Berlin. "The Little Conquerors," by Ann Abelson, the tale of an Italian family in New England; and "The Ballad of Peckham Rye," by Muriel Spark, the tale of an Angry Young Man who sells himself to the multinational research department of two competing companies.

In a similar vein is "Basic Seuba" (Self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) by Fred M. Roberts. It is a practical book on the operation, maintenance and use of SCUBA gear.

Other new non-fiction titles are "The Hyphenated Family," by Hermann Hagedorn, the saga of the German-American family that produced the great biographer of Theodore Roosevelt; "It's a Woman's World," by Ruth Stout, a guide for women on making life more interesting and enjoyable; and "First Men to the Moon," by Werner Von Braun, an illustrated account of the problems of putting man into space.

The unknown war dead who fill graves around the world have stimulated the imagination of Quentin Reynolds and he has produced a new novel called "Known But to God." More fact than fiction, Reynolds tells of and speculates upon the lives of the three men who are entombed in Arlington National Cemetery. He follows their lives until their deaths at the Argentine, in the Pacific and in Korea.

The Real Swamp Fox

Tax Redistribution Plan

Since the proposed tax redistribution plan has been advertised as a scheme that would reduce from 5 to 50 per cent the equalized mill rate for 1,593 of the state's 1,828 cities, villages and towns, it is being spoken of as something of a miracle plan. However, it should be noted that it is a distribution plan and not a tax collection plan.

For this plan to become effective it will be necessary for the state to raise the money. About half of the necessary $200 million fund now is being raised in the form of shared taxes. The state collects about $115 million in income and utility taxes which it shares with localities. Under the new proposal this entire sum would go into the central fund for redistribution. It then would be necessary for the state to raise approximately another $100 million through a sales tax, income tax or a combination of both. The subcommittee studying redistribution is not concerned with the method to be used in raising the money. That's a matter to be decided later by the whole commission.

Thus when the people of a given locality look at the tax redistribution table and learn that their municipality will have a lower mill tax rate (commonly called the property tax) they have something less than the whole question before them. Quite obviously they cannot know how much they will be called upon to pay in either additional income taxes, through a sales tax or both, to bring about a reduction in their mill tax rate.

In Green Bay, the question is not difficult to decide. According to the table, Green Bay will get an increase of .55 in its mill rate. This is not a large increase but the city of Green Bay will also be called upon to pay in additional income or sales tax or both, a considerable amount of which will be used entirely to ease the burdens of taxpayers in other communities.

On the other hand, Appleton will receive a reduction in its mill tax rate of .44. This is a small reduction and quiet obviously will be offset many times by the additional income or sales tax required of the people of that city. Milwaukee stands to have its mill tax reduced by 5.95. This is a fairly large reduction in the mill tax but it almost certainly will be only a fractional part of the loss Milwaukee will sustain in additional income or sales tax or both which may be required before the redistribution can be possible.

The use of the local tax rates as a measure of the need for eligibility for the state collected tax money fails to recognize that a large portion of the local tax rate is accounted for by the school levy. In many local districts, school taxes are proportionately low because a large number of children are enrolled in private and parochial schools. These private schools are supported by the residents of the districts. This tax redistribution plan makes no provision whatsoever for taking this matter into account. Then the question arises — should these families be considered less deserving of state financing of local services simply because they choose to pay for schooling of their children by contributing to private institutions? Here is a case where parents are paying for their own private schools, are contributing to the cost of public schools and now for that very reason have a fairly low mill tax rate. Because of this low rate they will be asked to contribute again and a larger sum than many others to the cost of education in other districts. It is obviously unfair and certainly will prove embarrassing when the plan comes up for further consideration.

BY GEORGE F. SCHEER

"Our band is few, but true and tried, our leader frank and bold;

The British soldier trembles when Marion's name is told."

There is the poem, and there is the sentence or two in school-books about the phantom general who sallied at night from his secret lair in the swamps to attack the British foe. And there is the sobriquet, the Swamp

Francis Marion, the Swamp Fox, was the stuff that legends are made of, but what he actually did in the Revolutionary War to tighten the noose around Cornwallis' neck is hardly recalled today. Here a biographer of Marion goes into it.

Fox. And that's about all anyone seems to remember about Gen. Francis Marion.

Yet when you piece together the surviving letters, the orderly books, the official reports, when you read the maps and go to the ground he fought over, you come to realize that Marion's daring forays and breathtaking adventures are not merely the romantic stuff of folk literature, but that they actually influenced the strategy of armies and made a definite and discernible contribution to the British defeat in the South.

Never Let Up

From the outbreak of the Revolution until the spring of 1770, Marion put in five useful, though relatively inactive, years as an officer of the Second South Carolina Continental Regiment. But it was as a relentless guerrilla who never let up on the British after they overran his state that he earned his significance in history.

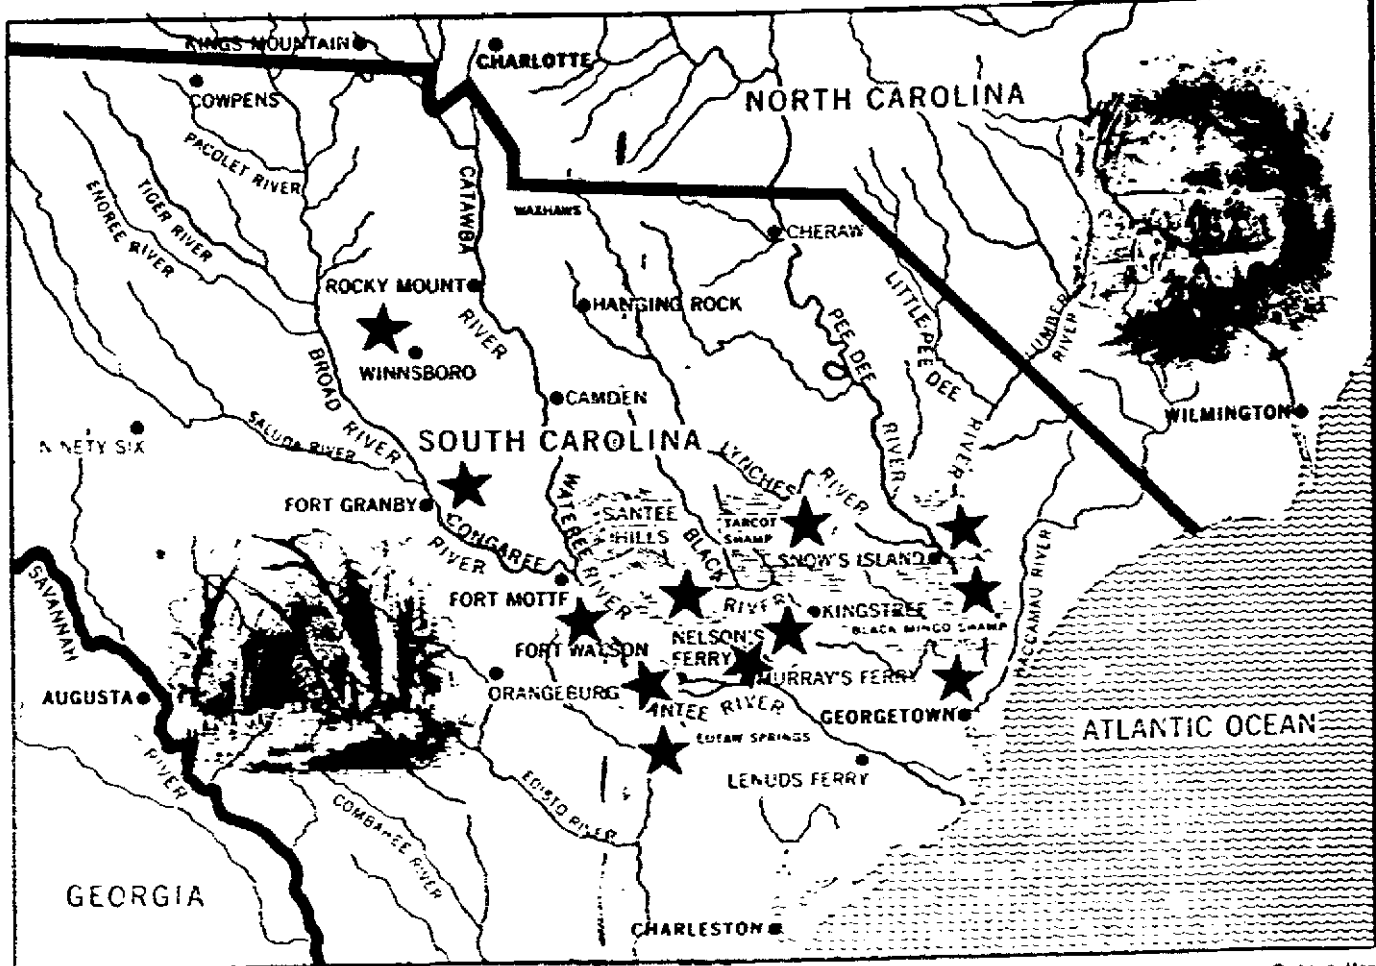

Marion was 48 at the time, "rather below the middle stature," one of his men recalled, "lean and swarthy . . . his forehead was large and high and his eyes black and piercing."

Whether he fought his brigade mounted or afoot he was always in the front of the attacks that made his name a terror in the British and Tory camp. It was not for personal conspicuousness in battle that his men remembered him, but for a quiet fearlessness, for sagacity and perseverance, and for never foolishly risking himself or the brigade. They rode with confidence behind a man who never hesitated in the face of impossible odds to fight and run to live and fight another day.

Volunteer Group

When Marion's men came into the field, their state was overrun by the British and their rebel government had evaporated. Of their own will they took up arms, and it was impossible to preserve any more discipline among them than their patriotism and the dangers of the moment imposed. Therefore, brigade strength fluctuated from 20 to 30 men to as many as several hundred, and Marion had to plan his operations accordingly.

Marion was born in the country he defended to a second-generation French Hugenot family. As a boy he lived in the vicinity of Georgetown where he hunted and fished the salt marshes and inland swamps and semitropical woods.

Shortly before the Revolution he acquired a place of his own on the Santee River and was just getting his bachelor house in order when war came. He was elected a captain of the Second South Carolina Regiment, steadily rose in rank, and for a time was in field command of the southern army when it wintered near the Georgia border.

Outlook Was Bad

With Gen. Benjamin Lincoln's surrender of his entire army at Charleston, the American cause both north and south seemed all but lost. In the North, Washington's worn-out army lay deteriorating in New Jersey. The French were bottled up by a British fleet at Newport. Within three weeks after Lincoln's surrender South Carolina appeared to be totally subjugated. Without firing a shot, British garrisons occupied a chain of posts commanding the interior.

But to the enemy's surprise and consternation, the paralysis that at first seized the South Carolinians was short-lived. Patriot guerrillas, seeming to spring from nowhere, began a force, harassing warfare.

The partisans took some comfort from reports that a small, new Continental army had arrived in North Carolina around this nucleus the militia of Virginia and the Carolinians might build a force strong enough to stop the redcoats. In last July, Marion rode northward to join in Gen. Horatio Gates, commanding the army, reconnoitered the value of Marion's familiarity with the country and ordered Marion to "march with and attend" him as he advanced toward the enemy's key post at Camden.

Battle in the Bogs

But within two weeks, the army was putting itself back together. At the same time Marion heard from South Carolina that the enemy had laid waste a path 70 miles long and 15 wide as a punishment to the inhabitants who had "joined Marion and Perry in their late incursions."

are marked by stars.

So Marion marched back into the heart of the enemy's defenses in South Carolina around Kingston.

The marches and actions that ensued are almost lost in the larger history of the campaigns in the South; but they were shrewdly planned, smoothly executed, and very damaging to the enemy.

It was the terrain that gave to the native fighter a distinct advantage. It was unbelievably flat, unbelievably wet, and unbelievably wild. Down across it swept seven large rivers. For miles bordering them were dense, vast cypress swamps. No roads crossed the swamps and bogs except the secret paths for the hunter. But it was country that Marion knew, so that for him the treacherous avenues of swift surprise attack and safe retreat.

They were small engagements, poorly chronicled, though post-sung, but as the weeks passed into winter, Lord Cornwallis began to feel the cumulative effect of them.

Calls on 'The Butcher'

The one man Cornwallis thought capable of running down and destroying the elusive Marion was Lieut. Col. Banastre Tarleton, known as "The Butcher" and without doubt the most bitterly hated of all the redcoats.

Marion led Tarleton a chase in that November of 1780. When Tarleton set out after him, Marion cut through the Woodbury, a tangled swamp, and camped for the night six miles beyond it. Tarleton dared not cross it in the dark. As he was riding round it in the morning, Marion continued down Black River 35 miles "where there was no road." Tarleton, after missing his way "for seven hours through swamps and bogs," hit 25 miles of flat road and then ran into the Ox Swamp, where the chase went out of him.

Through the rest of the winter, and into the spring of 1781, Marion played his partisan role. In December, Gen. Nathaniel Greene arrived at Charlotte to succeed Gates. By mid-April he had maneuvered a greatly weakened Cornwallis into Virginia and returned to South Carolina to battle for possession of the state.

British Leave

As Greene advanced toward Camden, Marion, joined by the splendid legion of young Light Horse Harry Lee, moved against the inner chain of British posts on the Santee and Congaree.

One by one the posts fell. After a July 22 battle, the British evacuated Camden. Augusta surrendered, and Fort Granby. The British blew up their own fort at Nelson's Ferry. Marion dashed to Georgetown and thus time took it. Marion, Sumter and Lee spent a vigorous summer striking behind the enemy army.

Late in August, Greene came down from the High Hills to fight his last pitched battle of the war at Eutaw Springs. For the first time since the assault on Savannah, Marion found himself in formal battle, in command of the right wing of Greene's front line. It must have seemed strange to Marion's partisans to be there. It was pretty much a drawn battle. Both sides retreated. But Greene had damaged the British so severely that they withdrew into their lines at Charleston and never emerged again.

Today many of Marion's battles are under man-made levees. Others are long lost under towns and roads. But the old maps show where he rode and the battle documents tell what he did, and it was a magnificent performance.

What Is Inhumane in the U.N.?

The report of United Nations representative Dayal in the Congo, that Patrice Lumumba is being brutally treated and held "under conditions reported to be inhumane in respect to health and hygiene," has been denied by Strong Man Mobutu. But the army colonel who is in charge of much of the Congo also pointed out that one of his officers is being held by Lumumba's followers and that Lumumba can expect nothing better for himself.

The dispute has pointed up again the impotence of the United Nations in meting out justice if its authority to do so is not accepted by everyone concerned. United Nations troops are in the Congo but only because neither Lumumba's followers nor those of President Kasavubu dare do without them. It was not fear of the strength of the U.N. or recognition of its authority to keep the peace in the Congo which permitted the troops to enter; it was hope of both sides that the troops could be used to the advantage of one or the other political group. While atrocities and brutalities were being committed by both sides, U.N. troops had to stand by and watch since too much interference would bring about their withdrawal.

Obviously, as far as human rights are concerned, stripping the flesh from Lumumba's fingers or putting out the eye of an officer of Mobutu is no worse than the widespread rape of white women and murder of U.N. soldiers which has gone on. Combined with the need of the U.N. to be accepted before it can act is the adulterated state of ideals from the U.N. What sort of things are accepted in the U.N. as "cruel and unusual punishment" or beneath human dignity?

Opponents of independence for the peoples of Africa or racists will argue that brutality is all we can expect from the Congo where tribal customs have condoned torture for centuries. To some extent this point of view has validity; there is no question but that the people of the Congo were ill-prepared for immediate self-government. But the "civilized" nations of the world have set a poor example in this century. The tales of horror that emerged from such highly civilized countries as Germany and Japan after World War II almost make the Mau Mau tribal rites appear no worse than fraternity initiations. The reports of the dungeons and the refinements of inducing human suffering and misery in Hungary today make the blood curdle. The French in Algeria have not been remiss in the ways to sadistic cruelty. Latin American dictators, both right and left, use the instruments of torture freely.

Part of the problem is that the United Nations Declaration of Human Rights is so foggy and foolish that it cannot be seriously considered as a document. When the "right" to a job is equated with freedom from inhuman torture, the whole matter of human rights gets so bogged down that any action is impossible.

What we need is a renewed realization that there are absolute rights of mankind untouched by government or regime but which governments ought automatically to safeguard. This is the old doctrine of human rights which was part of the basis for our own Declaration of Independence and Constitution. It has been scuttled by the theorists who have confused governments with God and man-made customs with eternal truths. It also has been handicapped by those who try to use absolutes for their own particular benefit.

Unless inhumane treatment is denounced by the United Nations and its denunciation made to be respected, the dreadful lessons of Dachau, the Bataan death march and the Soviet Doctrine that the state is supreme will be forgotten or shrugged away. This is not something to be discussed in committee. The U.N. must act.

John Brown Sympathy Meetings

100 YEARS AGO

Quoted from the Appleton Crescent for the week of Dec. 8, 1899:

A "John Brown" sympathy meeting in Easton, at which Fred Douglas and Wendell Phillips were in attendance, was broken up by many of the white business men of that city.

In the evening a meeting was held at the church of J. S. Martin, a "forlorn" champion of democracy, at which Wm. W. John Brown, Jr., and other leading sympathizers, invited their feelings freely, though interruption from within but also somewhat outside.

The meeting dispersed about 10 o'clock and threats of riot treatment were made in regard to Phillips, in anticipation of a riot, the 2nd battalion of infantry was held in readiness by order of the Mayor and the police were out in force.

MADISON — The belated statistical analyses from Democratic party headquarters about the gains the Democrats claim to have made in the recent state elections have an air of whistling past the cemetery.

But there are worthy signs of a second level, revealing for the first time that something has happened — but not yet generally appreciated — the fact that the election was as close to a standoff in the competition of the Republican and Democratic parties as the state is likely to see in a long time.

The Republicans are vastly encouraged, and have a right to be, in coming closer to toppling the Democratic Governor than most independent analysts had thought likely. In recapturing two of the state constitutional offices, a congressional seat, and a solid majority in both houses of the state legislature, in immediate and tangible terms, the Republicans clearly had the better of it in the state elections — not to mention the fact that they carried the state for president to a moderately decisive margin.

BUT AGAIN

During the last anxiety of the post-mortem Democrats to show themselves in the light of these is something to be said for the percentage comparison shown on the tally sheet for the state committee for the other day.

Lacey tried to cheer up his associates by reminding them that the Democrats got a clear majority of all the votes cast for the state legislature and for congressmen, while they were also hanging onto the equally important office of governor.

He noted that the presidential ticket here got a better vote than in any other election since the reorganization of the Wisconsin Democratic party and that it ran only two per cent behind the national percentage in this historically Republican state.

And he offered an intriguing footnote that has generally been overlooked in the post-election commentary — the Democrats actually increased, in spite of their reverses in state politics, the number of their offices in the county courthouse.

The courthouse machinery, as every practical man knows, is the heart of the state campaign and a party that's carrying a landslide in the courthouses has a right to chuckle a bit in the face of its more immediate and more apparent reverses.

WEIGHTING

The Lacey percentage calculations are weighted on the side of optimism, to some degree, in that there were 14 state assembly districts where the Democratic promises ran without opposition. That served to bring up the total percentage of Democratic legislative votes. Yet it is a fact that the Republicans showed a strategic weakness when they defaulted in 14 assembly districts. It is something that a really healthy party cannot dare not do if there is any way to prevent it. The Republicans have a sterile organization in Milwaukee county which is becoming relatively more important in political decisions each year.

gressman also has some structural weaknesses that need mending.

What becomes apparent from these considerations is the conviction that was more dimly observed in the immediate post-election period — that no political party in Wisconsin had a mandate on Nov. 8 and that even if it did, it will be facing the most ferocious of the struggle in the months ahead.

It should make the new legislative term in Madison one of the most careful and attentive in years.

Professional Trappers Were Hard at work when the mink and muskrat seasons opened in Wisconsin this fall. In the panel of pictures above, G. W. Siefert, a western Wisconsin trapper is shown in various scenes along his trapline. At left he heads into the bush afoot with pack basket on his back. The next

the 'rat and is shaking it dry before putting it in his canoe. Note the rubber glove Siefert wears to protect his right, or working hand, from the icy water.

The Degree of Success in Operating a trapline on a professional basis is reflected in the number of pelts a trapper can string up. This is a view of 21 mink and over 250 muskrats in the fur room of G. W. Siefert, a professional trapper from Western Wisconsin. The catch represents a portion of his early season work. The mink, in the background are on drying stretchers. The muskrat pelts have been removed from stretchers and are tied in bundles as to grade and size.

Pre-Season Care Cuts Key Skiing Problems

BY TOM TORINUS
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

A ski hill on the first day of good snow is filled with playful sights. There's the character who gets to the top of the hill the first time and anxiously pushes off—and then pushes and pushes and pushes. He can't move. Three inches of snow are packed on the bottom of his skis. Another one is the enthusiast whose first run of the year is down hill on foot after a runaway ski.

It doesn't have to be this way. The skier who pulls his boards out of the basement a few weeks before the season and goes to work on them should have no and-a-half-footers have been in problems. Wood bottoms should be treated with base wax. Plastic bottoms should be patched and smoothed. Bindings should be adjusted. Edges should be rubbed with steel wool and sharpened.

After the Olympics last winter a national news magazine reported that Penney Pitou, "talked like a teamster." This hardly seemed true when she was in Appleton Nov. 23 narrating a style show. Both her speech and presence were attractive. It was probably the first affair of its type that men actually enjoyed.

Pine Mountain in Iron Mountain, Mich., is ready to go. Tows have been re-erected and the hill has been groomed.

Shorty skis are back in the disrepair racks of ski shops. The two-footers on them should have no and-a-half-footers have been in problems. Wood bottoms should be treated with base wax. they may be valuable in instructing beginners. They will be given a fair chance in schools all over the country.

A little bending and stretching is in order on these snowless days before the season. They are good insurance against the rope-towed arm, that can do little but droop after a couple hours of uphill travel, and the galloping sprung leg, that feels like it's disappeared on each bump.

Skiers can use standard exercises and improvise their own. Deep knee bends, sit-ups, leg lifts and push ups are all old stand-bys. Stretching exercises that make the body more flexible are increasingly important with the new popularity of the Austrian system. Shoulders, arms, legs and stomach should all be worked over.

Those who missed Warren Miller's new ski movies in Appleton a few weeks ago will have a chance to view them in Green Bay in February. This time Miller will appear and give his customary commentary.

Plenty of Deer Left in North, Game Chief Says

MADISON — There remains an adequate supply of deer in Wisconsin.

Decreasing Fur Prices Cut Income of State Trappers

Mink Population Down in Some Sections; Muskrats Numerous

BY JAY REED
Post-Crescent Outdoor Editor

Wisconsin trappers have a tough trail to follow.

Prices on all but a few furs, noticeably mink, are at or near record low levels. Competition is intense in these comparatively rare sections of the state where trapping is considered good.

To get the full story on trapping conditions as they exist today, this reporter returned to western Wisconsin to spend a week on the trapline with one of the midwest's acknowledged top professional trappers, G. W. Siefert, about whom the Post-Crescent published a series of articles several years ago.

What we found was not heartening from the standpoint of the trapper.

The mink and muskrat seasons on isolated or reserve areas along the Mississippi river had just opened. Indications were that muskrats were there in considerable number but mink, the real money maker as far as the pro trapper is concerned, were few. This is just about the way it worked out.

25 Rats Per Day
In the seven days I spent with him, Siefert trapped 175 muskrats and five mink. This means he averaged 25 muskrats per day, which isn't bad considering that the law restricted him to only 30 traps on refuge land.

He also took several raccoon in traps during that week. He was not trapping for coon. These were animals which simply stepped into traps intended for mink. Whenever it was possible to release the coon, he did so. Those he could where sets are made in tiny coon caves, will force Siefert and the rest of the trappers to change their method in the eyes of a professional trapper who has to make every moment count, they are not worth a rat's tail. This type of set has an entirely different procedure possible, Siefert skins the coon a mink. The trappers, of course, with its own particular problems.

Understand Methods
To understand this you have to understand the methods used by too long, the prices may drop. These were these pros in trapping during open This is the choice the trapper must make.

The trappers shun the marshes and concentrate along the banks of the Mississippi river. Freezing conditions, when they come, will force Siefert and the rest of the trappers to change their method in the eyes of a professional trapper who has to make every moment count, they are not worth a rat's tail. This type of set has an entirely different procedure possible, Siefert skins the coon a mink. The trappers, of course, with its own particular problems.

Ordinary boots with wool socks, it was found, were wearable for only a few minutes at the most Games were played and dancing held for the 71 children participating. Tables were gaily decorated and a Christmas tree and crib scene erected. In charge were Mrs. George Kroes and Mrs. Orie Milton, juvenile directors.

Sherwood Woman Completes 55 Years of Choir Service

SHERWOOD — Mrs. Edward Koutnik began her 56th year as a member of a church choir Thursday. She started as a member of the St. Mary Catholic Church children's choir in Kaukauna when she was 9 years old.

She is now a member of the choir at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Sherwood. She is an alto.

Sister Mary Beats, a first grade teacher at St. Mary Grade School, was a fellow member of the children's choir with Mrs. Koutnik. Rehearsals were held in the church rectory and a hand-pumped organ was used as accompaniment in the church lighted by hanging kerosene lamps.

Miss Josephine Steinbrecker, sister and housekeeper for her brother, the late Rev. F. X. Steinbrecker, pastor at St. Mary for 22 years, was the choir director. In 1925, Mrs. Koutnik and her late husband moved to Sherwood where she joined the Sacred Heart choir.

When the late Rev. Peter Grossnick organized a 40-voice choir, Sylvester Jansen of Kimberly was named director.

A new pipe organ was to be dedicated at a midnight mass at which the new choir was to make its debut. However, the new organ put too great a strain on the church's electrical system and the new choir had to sing a cappella in the flickering light of candles and kerosene lamps hurriedly borrowed from neighbors when the power failed.

Mrs. Koutnik has been a choir member for 55 years.

$15,000 Added To Hospital Fund Campaign

Combined Locks Firm Makes Contribution; Total Now $193,840

KAUKAUNA — The fund drive to finance the new wing at the Kaukauna Community Hospital was given a big boost Thursday when Reinhold Vogt, president of the Combined Locks Paper Company, announced that firm was donating $15,000 to the drive.

This contribution plus five smaller donations brings the drive mark to $193,840, or $33,150 short of the $225,000 goal.

In a letter to E. H. Jennings, drive chairman, Vogt noted the concern would donate $5,000 this year with the remainder to be paid as the board of directors of the Combined Locks Paper Company vote on the donation. This firm also was a large contributor when the hospital was first started.

Records indicate the firm ranks third among the number of employees or employee families who were treated at the hospital since its opening. The new wing is designed to provide better hospital services and facilities rather than increase capacity.

The POWER of FAITH
by Howard Brodie

As Christmas approached in the Austrian village of Oberndorf in 1818, the church organ broke down. Father Joseph Mohr felt that his flock would be disappointed without the prepared organ music, it is said, and so began to write the words of a new song, Silent Night, Holy Night. It is documented that on Christmas Eve day, he handed his words to the church organist, Franz Gruber "with the request that he write for it a suitable melody arranged for two solo voices, chorus, and a guitar accompaniment. On the very same evening the latter... handed to the pastor his simple composition, which was thereupon immediately performed on that holy Night of Christmas Eve..." Thus, the seeming obstacle of a broken organ, gave rise, through the talent and spirit of two men, to the inspired Christmas carol.

of all these artifacts, however, is the early life of our Alma Mater. Lawrence College alumni who attended the school on the hard-looked at the school have speculated that it must have been the storehouse for the presidential head of the college to commemorate when the college was too poor to afford a better one.

A pack of dog-eared almanacs of the early 1800s are preserved with the name Eleazer Williams written in fine copper-plate script on their covers. They are a link with the Episcopal ministry to the Oneida Indians who came to be the first Dean of the college, and whose name of Williams paved the way for the college's founding. Williams moved money to Boston and then to Lawrence, when he founded the college. Lawrence is now in possession of thousands of acres of land in Wisconsin along the Fox River. Part of an endowment to the college at his death Lawrence founded the college.

Carl J. Waterman

Other gifts from the Lawrence family include a second edition of Sir Walter Scott's "History of the World" published in 1817 and still in its original binding of the Lawrence crest, binding. The collection's basic bookplate bears the likeness of Samuel Appleton, the man for whom the college was named and whose son, George Morton, '31, trustee bookplate, includes the John McNaughton library of history and economics, and the late acquired D. C. Everett collection. There are also plates of special design marking the gifts of Carl G. Scott, benefactor's portrait done by G. P. A. Healy hanging in the Boston Athenaeum.

Six former faculty members are memorialized in collections in their fields, all by alumni gift: Hiram A. Jones in classics (these books are farmed out to the classics library in Main Hall); Charlotte Lorenz in Spanish; John Herbert Farley in philosophy; Carl J. Waterman in music (this collection of opera scores, made in the last year, is in the Conservatory of Music library); and the personal library of the late President Plantz.

Several alumni are remembered as well: the late Rev. and Mrs. Henry Colman, graduates in the first class of 1857; Dr. John G. Davies, 1922 and William George Morton, '31. Trustee bookplates include the John McNaughton library of history and economics, and the late acquired D. C. Everett collection. There are also plates of special design marking the gifts of Carl G. Scott, benefactor's portrait done by G. P. A. Healy hanging in the Boston Athenaeum.

There is also a whole room full of documents having to do with the development of this territory into a state. Known as the Wisconsin Collection, it is not common in college libraries in this area. Probably the most valuable items in the college library, from an extra-Lawrence point of view, are a page from the world-famous Gutenberg Bible and a second edition of Sir Walter Scott's "History of the World" published in 1817 and still in its original binding of the Lawrence crest, binding. The collection's basic bookplate bears the likeness of Samuel Appleton, the man for whom the college was named and whose son, George Morton, '31, trustee bookplate, includes the John McNaughton library of history and economics, and the late acquired D. C. Everett collection. There are also plates of special design marking the gifts of Carl G. Scott, benefactor's portrait done by G. P. A. Healy hanging in the Boston Athenaeum.

Biggest Task of Municipalities Is Overcoming Apathy Toward CD

BY DON CASTONIA
Post-Crescent Staff Writer

NEENAH — The problems facing Winnebago County communities in setting up a Civil Defense organization are echoed by all of the local directors. One that is repeated over and over again is public apathy.

Lack of top flight volunteers has been more acutely felt on the local level than by the county organization. While one of the main duties of the Winnebago County

This is the second in a series of articles on the civil defense organization in Winnebago County, including the county organization and the program in cities and villages.

Civil Defense headquarters is to coordinate the efforts of the cities and villages in the county, it is the community that must provide the basis of the organization.

The plan is being felt in Oshkosh and Omro where E. J. Larson and Arle Alto are the Civil Defense directors, respectively.

Auxiliary Police

"We have less than one-third of the auxiliary police we would need in time of emergency," Ledvina said. While much has been done, much more remains to be done in Oshkosh.

The county's latest city can be said to be the only county community that is participating in the Federal Civil Defense fund program.

Ledvina said the common council will act this month on providing a fund for a working system. The government will match the city's contribution for the project, which has been approved by the Federal Civil Defense office.

No Plan

However, Ledvina revealed, there has been no evacuation plan drawn up for Oshkosh, nor has there been a shelter program instituted.

Ledvina said that in most disaster emergencies, the city's Civil Defense personnel would work with the Red Cross. If a bombing occurred, a city evacuation would be held in the city.

In the case of a nuclear attack, Ledvina said that a lot of planning has been done.

Names on Record

The city Civil Defense office has on record the names and location of all homes, sleeping and eating places in and around Oshkosh. The names of all nurses and doctors are also on record.

The city also has two 200 bed emergency hospital units that can be set up and operating in a matter of 48 hours. There are only 48 such hospital units in Wisconsin.

With the field hospitals are designed to be used in a major disaster, they could be used for a variety of other purposes.

Black Outlook

In the case of a nuclear attack, the city Civil Defense office is working on a plan to evacuate the city.

Favor Colts by 7 Points Over Rams Sunday

Only 'Eastern' Race Left Is For Second Place

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Green Bay Packers were three-point favorites today to defeat the San Francisco 49ers, take at least a temporary lead in the Western Conference and remain in the running for a crack at their first National Football League title since 1944.

The Packers, 49ers and Baltimore Colts started the weekend with the Packers leading the Western Conference and the Colts leading the Eastern Conference.

The Colts are at Los Angeles Sunday and are 7-point favorites to make up the half-game edge stated for the winner of today's nationally televised Packers-49ers showdown—CBS, 3:30 p.m., SCT.

In the event of a Green Bay-San Francisco tie, the Colts will have a chance to move a half-game in front by beating the Rams, then clinch their third straight Western title by whipping the 49ers next weekend. The Packers play at Los Angeles next week.

If the Packers, 49ers and Colts all go 1-1 in the two remaining games, the Chicago Bears (5-1) could take it all by beating the Browns at Cleveland Sunday and the Lions at Detroit next week.

The Lions (5-3), by defeating the Dallas Cowboys (0-10-1) at home, then the Bears, could force a four-way tie with the current leaders in the event of that three-way 1-1 split and a Bear fall-down. The Lions are 13-point favorites, the Bears 7-point underdogs.

A four-way Western tie would push the title game—now set for Philadelphia on Dec. 26—back to Jan. 8. The first alternate date is Jan. 1.

With the Philadelphia Eagles (9-1) already assured of the Eastern crown, the question is who will finish second, the New York Giants (5-3-2) or the Browns (6-3-1)?

The Eagles are two-point favorites to defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers (4-5-1) at Pittsburgh. The Eagles have won nine straight, including a 34-7 victory over the Steelers at Philadelphia.

The Browns and Giants are the only teams with a chance to improve their point production with each game, led his team with 16 points in the most recent outing — a 60-49 loss to Lourdes.

High Cliff Marina Gets State Okay

Project to be Done By Next Summer if Weather Cooperates

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON—A marina on Lake Monona in High Cliff Forest Park has been approved by the Wisconsin Conservation Commission. The project will be financed by private funds raised in the High Cliff area.

Robert Luedke, state parks administrator, said construction probably will get underway early next spring, and if weather conditions are favorable, the boating facility will be available for use by Winnebago boating enthusiasts during part of the summer season.

Sponsor of the project is the private High Cliff Forest Park Association, which has raised $92,000 in private contributions. Engineers estimate that the project will cost about $124,000. Association leaders are confident they can raise the rest of the sum to be required.

Only One In State
The marina will be the only facility of its kind within the state parks system.

Koenigs said it has not yet been decided whether the state will contract for the construction, or whether a site will be turned over to the private group to enable it to handle the contract for the building. He said the state will provide some excavation at the site in connection with park road improvements.

There will be no state funds involved in the construction. The collaboration with the private citizens group goes back to the original authorization of the state park in the area and the private financing has enabled the development of the site at a considerably more rapid pace than would otherwise have been possible.

4 Escape Injury in 2 Accidents

WAUPACA—Four men escaped injury early Friday morning in two similar car-truck accidents eight miles apart in eastern Waupaca County.

The county truck driven by Leonard O. Butt, 59, star route, Fremont, collided with the car driven by Dale C. Louison, 38, route 2, Iowa, at 8 a.m. at the junction of Highway 54 and Church Street a quarter mile west of Northport.

County police said both were going east on 54 when Louison passed the truck while Butt was attempting a right turn.

The truck driven by Edwin Danke, 61, route 1, Fremont, collided with the car driven by Charles Wranosky, 27, Hortonville, at 8:55 a.m. on Highway 10 a half mile east of Readfield.

Danke attempted to make a left turn from the eastbound lane of Highway 10. Wranosky approached the intersection from the other direction.

County police said the intersection is at the top of a hill.

Joint Airport Dispute May Influence State

Governor Troubled About Disagreement, Hints He May Delay Port Budget Decision

Post-Crescent Madison Bureau
MADISON — The dispute about a joint Winnebago - Outagamie county airport proposal may have an effect on state airport financing policies, Gov. Gaylord Nelson indicated here Friday.

Interrogating T. K. Jordan, director of the state department of aeronautics, the governor said he is troubled about the lack of agreement in the Fox River Valley. The topic came up when the governor asked Jordan why he had opposed the joint airport at a meeting of the Winnebago County board before the board vote killing the project.

Nelson expressed doubts also about the ultimate feasibility of operating two commercial airports as near to each other as those of Winnebago and Outagamie counties, and said he wants to explore the matter further. Since the questioning came during a hearing on the state aeronautics department budget, the governor appeared to be hinting that he may reserve a decision on the airport aid budget until his doubts are cleared up.

No Basis For Truth
"It bothers me that we have no basis of evaluating the truth in these disputes," Nelson grumbled, and Jordan offered to send him a complete written report.

Several officials indicated that there are considerations that have not yet been made public.

Don Olson of Two Rivers, one of Nelson's appointments to the state aeronautics commission said community pride was primarily involved in the board's decision and no witness, on either side of the dispute, would have influenced the vote.

Protests Fast
Jordan said the Oshkosh airport site will serve customers from Fond du Lac and other localities southward, the proposed new airport would be expensive, and the sponsors have no assurance that the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board would franchise new site for scheduled service to replace scheduled flights at Appleton and Oshkosh.

He said $2,500,000 has been mentioned as the cost of a joint airport, but he said that would be "just a start," and it would leave the problem of abandonment to the costly Winnebago county airport and pressure for enlargement of the Fond du Lac airport.

Lt. John Gosch Submits Survey Of Metered Stalls

- What is the best kind of policy for your home and valuable household items?
- The pattern for many years has been to carry insurance against losses by fire, lightning and extended coverage. Extended coverage covers damage from smoke, explosion, aircraft, terrorism, hail, riot, civil commotion, and vehicle damage caused to your home by others. This is still a popular type of insurance with homeowners.
- The modern trend is to carry a broadform "homeowners" policy. In addition to the above coverages, a "homeowners" policy covers claims of others for injuries upon your premises for which you are legally liable; additional living expense which pays for the rent at another location while your home is being repaired or replaced; theft of household items on premises and theft of personal items while traveling; and damage which may be accidentally caused by you and members of your family to the property of others.
- This is called "package" insurance: a number of coverages in one policy. The premium is reasonable with 15% Mutual saving.
